

BSAVA

Czech small animal veterinary association

29 April 2022

BSAVA, CSAVA and USAVA Offer Support Ukrainian Vets at EuroCongress

The Czech, Ukrainian, and British Small Animal Veterinary Associations (the CSAVA, USAVA, and BSAVA) have come together to support Ukrainian vets wanting to attend EuroCongress, a veterinary event hosted by FECAVA*, the body representing companion animal vets across Europe.

FECAVA's 27th EuroCongress takes place in Prague from 8-11 June 2022. It brings vets together to improve veterinary care, offering opportunities to share learning and professional development.

The CSAVA have agreed to waive the attendance fee for Ukrainian vets, whether they remain in Ukraine or have been forced to flee to other countries. They can also attend remotely at no cost.

The BSAVA will provide a travel and accommodation bursary fund of up to £10,000 to support qualified Ukrainian vets who would like to attend EuroCongress in person.

Ukrainian vets attending FECAVA will be offered private accommodation with their Czech colleagues in the first instance. If that is not possible or practical, they will be offered a room in one of FECAVA's nominated EuroCongress hotels without charge.

Delegates register with EuroCongress by 10 May 2022. To register, they or someone acting on their behalf will need to email FECAVA at fecava2022@guarant.cz and add FECAVA – Ukraine as the email subject line.

"The war did not force us to lay down our hands," says Dr Vladlen Ushakov, President of the USAVA. "Despite many veterinarians losing their homes and clinics, they have not lost their qualifications and professional desire to develop further."

Dr Natalia Ignatenko who represents USAVA at FECAVA remarks "Veterinarians working in Ukraine and Ukrainian colleagues who are now in Europe are sincerely grateful to the CSAVA, the BSAVA, and FECAVA for the unique opportunity to participate in the FECAVA EuroCongress in Prague. We appreciate this important display of solidarity and moral support."

Ondra Cita, CSAVA President, adds, "We greatly appreciate the creation of this joint initiative, which aims to provide moral and professional support to Ukrainian veterinary colleagues. We believe that their arrival in Prague and participation in the EuroCongress will be more than symbolic. We will be happy if it allows them to feel free and dignified, despite the incomprehensible aggression and war in their country."

Dr Krista Arnold, Honorary Secretary at the BSAVA finishes by saying: “We have been talking to our counterparts in Ukraine to understand how we might be able to support the professional lives of our Ukrainian colleagues, whether they are in Ukraine or have been displaced. We hope this initiative with the CSAVA and FECAVA goes a small way to helping Ukrainian vets to retain and advance their veterinary learning, whether they are working at home or in a new country, whether they are able to use new knowledge and skills now or in the future when they can return safely to their homes.”

ENDS

Notes to Editors:

FECAVA is the Federation of European Companion Animal Veterinary Associations. The EuroCongress scientific programme covers a wide range of subjects, including internal and behavioural medicine, soft tissue and orthopaedic surgery, imaging diagnostics, and dentistry. The event also includes social events and an exhibition space featuring major European brands. www.fecava.org

The British Small Animal Veterinary Association (BSAVA) improves small animal health and welfare by driving excellence in small animal practice. As a membership Association run by the profession, for the profession, BSAVA enables small animal veterinary professionals to develop their knowledge and skills through leading-edge education, scientific research and collaboration. www.bsava.com

Contact BSAVA:

PR & Communications Office, press@bsava.com or call 01452 726729.